

The Federal Government requires that institutions make direct disclosures to current and prospective students regarding programs that may lead to professional licensure or certification. The university encourages students to find the program they are interested in, or currently enrolled in, and review the information presented below. If you do not see your program below, this disclosure does not apply to you.

NOTE: Requirements for professional licensure vary among states. University of Massachusetts Global (UMass Global) has provided state licensing guidance here and on the program webpages and makes every effort to ensure licensure information is current. However, licensure regulations are subject to change. Therefore, UMass Global strongly encourages you to contact the state licensing board where you intend to seek licensure to ensure the program will meet the state's licensing requirements.

Finally, completion of a UMass Global program does not guarantee employment or licensure. Some state laws require a criminal background check, which may disqualify an individual from obtaining licensure. Field experience sites may require background checks before accepting students for a practicum or internship position. It is your responsibility to determine if your own circumstances pose such barriers.

Students outside of the United States, including in US Territories, are encouraged to contact an advisor to discuss licensure matters in more detail. Lastly, while a program may meet state licensure curriculum requirements it may be unavailable for enrollment due to State Authorization or other restrictions, etc.
